Feedback comments from markers:

Overall comments:

This is a well-argued and critical approach to the analysis of this report. You use a great range of literature with skill, showing how to bring various perspectives together in order to provide insight into issues. Overall this is well written and well presented.

Grasp of Field of Study

There is excellent use of the literature, which you manage to weave into your argument well. You use a good range of references overall and clearly demonstrate a wide ranging understanding of different perspectives and concepts. You present a careful analysis of the report using the main framework and other relevant literature. There is a good mix of standard DE texts and other philosophical traditions and perspectives. There is careful consideration of the degree to which the document represents the range of aspects of citizenship that may be relevant for young people. The choice of the themes of pedagogy, global mindedness and skills were interesting, and you could have provided a bit more rationale for the choice of those, making the links to earlier discussions of the literature even stronger. There are sections where you are presenting a range of perspectives and the authors' voices do tend to dominate. You do this well, but it would be good to feel that your voice is coming through as strongly in those sections as it does elsewhere.

Methodological and Research Skills

The approach of discussing theory and applying it together is often a more difficult route through an assignment but you carry this off well.

Structure, Communication and Presentation

There is a very clear rationale and personal justification for looking at this particular report. There is a nice introduction to the main theoretical framework to be used and a clear structure for the assignment. You write well and with an ability to convey complex ideas clearly. Referencing is done well and in general the presentation is good. There is sign posting at various points for the reader.

Formative Feedback

Continue doing what you do well and keep the reporting on the literature down to a minimum as your argument is stronger when you are presenting your views with the literature in support.

Provisional grade: A
